HISTORICAL NOTE

Sioux County, named for the Native American tribe of the same name, had already been created by 1857 when Nebraska achieved statehood. However, it was attached to Cheyenne County for another twenty years.

The Mallet brothers were the first whites to be in this area, followed by trappers. Sioux County was also part of cattle country. The first homesteader filed for land in Sioux County, near the Fort Robinson reservation in about 1880.

The County seat was originally called Summit. The name was later changed to Bowen. In 1887 the town was officially declared the county seat, and the name was once again changed, this time to Harrison in honor of President Benjamin Harrison. The Court House was built in 1888-1889.
