BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

David C. Butler was born near Linton, Indiana, on December 16 1829.

Little is known of his early years, although his education included some legal training. Forced to support his family by the premature death of his father, he engaged in stock raising and merchandising. Butler lost heavily in the panic of 1857, and in 1859 moved to Pawnee City, Nebraska, where he continued in the mercantile business. In 1860 he married Miss Lydia Storey of Bloomington, Indiana, a union which was to produce eight children.

In 1861 Butler was admitted to the Bar of Nebraska Territory and began the practice of law. In the same year he was elected to the Territorial House of Representatives, and was elected to the Territorial Council in 1864. Two years later he ran for Governor on the Republican ticket, defeating his opponent J. Sterling Morton by a small margin. Butler took office as the first Governor of the new State of Nebraska in February 1867 and immediately became involved in the transition from territorial status to statehood. Appointed by the legislature to head a three man "Commission to locate the Seat of State Government", he was instrumental in the relocation of the capitol from Omaha to the newly organized village of Lancaster (now Lincoln). With Governor Butler's guidance and approval, sites were chosen, lots were sold, and public buildings were erected in the new capitol city.

David Butler was re-elected to the office of Governor in 1868 and again in 1870. In the spring of 1871, soon after taking office for his third term, Butler found himself in serious trouble with the Legislature. Eleven articles of impeachment were brought against him, the first charging misuse of some $16,000 from the state school fund. Butler had allegedly made personal use of this money to purchase lots in the new city of Lincoln. He was suspended from office by the Supreme Court and subsequently tried by the State Senate. He was convicted on the first charge, although the remaining ten were dropped. The Supreme Court then removed him from office.

In 1877 the Legislature reviewed its action and adopted a resolution expunging the impeachment proceedings from the record. After ten years of retirement from public life, Butler was elected to the Nebraska State Senate on the Independent Ticket in 1882. Running on the Union Labor Ticket in 1888, he again sought the Governorship but was defeated. Following this defeat he retired to his home in Pawnee City, Nebraska, where he died on May 25, 1891.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection consists of two manuscript boxes of material arranged in six series: 1) General Correspondence, 1866-1872; 2) Applications for Commissioners of Deeds, 1866-1871; 3) Printed Matter; 4) Biographical Material; 5) Petitions and Miscellaneous, 1867-1871; and 6) Miscellany.

The bulk of the collection consists of correspondence, petitions and applications. Included are petitions for county organizations during this period, petitions for pardons and paroles, applications for Commissioner of Deeds, Notary Publics, and voting precinct registrars. There is a folder containing gathered statistics "Resources of Nebraska" on agriculture, etc. for the different counties, 1869. The printed matter series includes a copy of Articles of Impeachment, 1871, and a newspaper clippings concerning the death of his daughter, Violet Bradley.
