Section 5: Classification

The “Number of Resources Within Property” has been amended to reflect the amended boundaries of this district. Three new contributing resources, the Ansonia, Ainsworth, and Beverly Apartments, were added to the existing 19 resources within the district as a result of the boundary increase. No non-contributing resources were added as a result of the boundary increase.

The areas lost to the boundary decrease do not include any contributing resources. They were included as open space used by tenants for parking and recreation. A house located within the boundary decrease area has been demolished since 1984. Because it is not clear whether this house was counted as contributing or non-contributing in the original nomination, its loss does not affect the resource count or the integrity of the district.
The Ansonia Apartment building was constructed in 1929 immediately west of the Dartmore Apartments at 2221-2223 Jones Street. Built for owners John A. Anderson and John L. Soderberg by the Concrete Engineering Company of Omaha, this is the only building within the district that is not directly connected to the Drake Realty Construction Company. However, it is stylistically similar and significantly contributes to the overall historic feeling, setting, and character of the Drake Court Historic District.

The Ansonia is a U-shaped, three-story structure that surrounds a central courtyard that opens to Jones Street. The street-facing end walls of the “U” continue in the same plane as the front of the Dartmore Apartments and generally reflect their scale, form, and composition. Structurally, the brick clad building has a reinforced concrete frame. Functionally, the building contains a total of 24 apartment units divided among three floors. Four entrances—two angling from the inside corners of the “U” and two facing each other across the courtyard—provide access to stairways that each serve two apartments per floor.

Stylistically, the Ansonia is primarily a simple, pragmatic structure that exhibits both Arts and Crafts and Period Revival elements. Arts and Crafts details include the two gable-roofed entrances that face each other across the courtyard with their decoratively cut bargeboards, exposed rafter ends and brackets with pendants, and scrolled wrought iron eave brackets. Period Revival elements include the tower-like projections that angle across the structure’s inside corners with their Tudor-arched doorways, and the use of the Tudor arch for several window openings. Terra-cotta is used sparingly for quoin-like work and several decorative panels (Photos 4 and 5).

The Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments
The Ainsworth Apartments (2230 Jones) and Beverly Apartments (2236 Jones) were constructed by the Drake Realty Construction Company in 1922. The Ainsworth and Beverly are identical twins with a small terraced courtyard located between the buildings (See photo 2). Their design is almost identical to Drake’s Dartmore Apartments just to the east. Both buildings are rectilinear and four stories tall with south-facing façades that include a central window area flanked by slit windows on the second through fourth stories. The central opening contains paired one-over-one, double hung windows that are horizontally separated at each story by paneling. The Ainsworth and Beverly have the same parapet and ornamentation at their peak and around their windows as the Dartmore Apartments; however, here the slit windows are bricked in. The buildings sit on a raised concrete foundation faced in brick on the façade.

The main difference between the Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments and the Dartmore Apartments are the side and rear elevations. Instead of using concrete block faced with brick, Drake used structural terra cotta blocks with a glazed surface finish in a buff color. Like the Dartmore Apartments, however, the side elevations contain six bays of paired one-over-one double hung windows on the second through fourth stories and fire exits on the rear elevation. A final difference between the Dartmore Apartments and the Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments is the canopy over their Georgian Revival entrances. The Dartmore Apartments have elongated curved canopies, while the Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments have small, flat, rectangular canopies with denticulated cornices (Photos 1, 2, 3 and 6).

[1] The Description for the Ansonia Apartments is taken in large part from the nomination to amend the boundaries of the Drake Court and Dartmore Apartment Historic District (a local landmark district) to include this building in 1984. The amendment was prepared by Lynn Meyer, Preservation Administrator for the City of Omaha.

Boundary Decrease

North of Drake Court
The open space north of Drake Court that was included in the original nomination has been lost to the construction of a new school and its associated playgrounds and parking. Therefore, it no longer retains sufficient integrity to convey its association with Drake Court. This land was originally included as open green space and a hard surface parking lot used by Drake Court and Dartmore Apartments residents. A retaining wall and fence clearly define the new boundary (Photos 9 and 10).

North of Dartmore Apartments
The area north of the Dartmore Apartments was included in the original nomination because it was used for parking and picnicking by apartment tenants. While it is still used for parking, the entire area has been paved and surrounded by modern fencing and landscaping (Photo 8). A small portion of what appears to be original brick wall and sidewalk between Jones Street and the parking lot is still present; however, this remnant is not enough to sufficiently carry a historic association with the nearby apartments.
Name Change: Drake Court Historic District

In addition to a boundary increase and decrease, this amendment changes the name of the historic district from the cumbersome "Drake Court Apartments and Dartmore Apartments Historic District" to the simplified “Drake Court Historic District.” The reasons for this change are fourfold:

1) Drake Court is a well-recognized name in Omaha that readily evokes the image of apartments. Other apartment buildings and complexes in Omaha have been listed in the National Register with names like "The Margaret," “Selma Terrace,” “Strehlow Terrace,” “Aquila Court” and “Terrace Court.” The use of the word “Apartments” is redundant.

2) Drake Court was the impetus for the development of all other apartments along Jones Street that are included in the historic district.

3) With the addition of the Ansonia, Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments, it seems unfair to include only the Dartmore Apartments in the name; however, it would be irrational to use all of the names. It seems ideal to avoid all names of the “associated” apartments in the historic district.

4) The name Dartmore is not always recognized or agreed upon. In addition, the Dartmore Apartments are commonly and historically known as the Drake Court Annex and the Eastridge Apartments, as well as by their individual names.

Boundary Increase Explanation

The boundary of the Drake Court Historic District (NPS #80002447) is being amended to include adjacent historic resources that are historically and architecturally related to Drake Court, but were not included in the original nomination. The Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments, also located along Jones Street, were not included within the boundaries of the district. These two buildings are nearly identical to the Dartmore Apartments, and were also built by the Drake Realty Construction Company in the early 1920s. Furthermore, both buildings are already discussed in the original nomination.

The oversight of the Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments was exacerbated by a federally-certified amendment in 1984 to the Drake Court Apartments and the Dartmore Apartments Local Landmark Heritage District (designated by the Landmark Heritage Preservation Commission of the City of Omaha, 1978). The 1984 amendment increased the boundaries of the local district to include the Ansonia Apartments, located immediately west of the Dartmore Apartments. While this boundary expansion was justified because the Ansonia Apartments do compliment the historic district’s architectural character, it seems inappropriate to include them and not the adjacent Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments.

No doubt, the Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments were not originally included because they were considered too far away for a justifiable boundary. However, if the Ansonia Apartments are included in the historic district, the stretch to include the two remaining Drake Realty Construction Company buildings along Jones Street becomes more acceptable. Furthermore, it currently seems more critical to include all the apartment buildings historically and architecturally related to Drake Court along Jones Street than to it does to avoid a difficult boundary.
Boundary Decrease Explanation

The open space north of Drake Court that was included in the original nomination has been lost to the construction of a new school and its associated playgrounds and parking. Therefore, it no longer retains sufficient integrity to convey its association with Drake Court. This land was originally included as open green space and a hard surface parking lot used by Drake Court and Dartmore Apartments residents. A retaining wall and fence clearly define the new boundary (photos 9 and 10).

The area north of the Dartmore Apartments was included in the original nomination because it was used for parking and picnicking by apartment tenants. While it is still used for parking, the entire area has been paved and surrounded by modern fencing and landscaping (Photo 8). A small portion of what appears to be original brick wall and sidewalk between Jones Street and the parking lot is still present; however, this remnant cannot sufficiently carry a historic association with the nearby apartments.

Therefore, the northern boundary of the historic district has been moved south to exclude this compromised area. The formal courtyard to the east of the Drake Court along 20th Street is still included in the district.

Criterion C: Architecture

The inclusion of the Ansonia, Ainsworth, and Beverly Apartments within the Drake Court Historic District does not affect the local significance of this property under Criterion C for architecture. The original statement of significance reads:

The Drake Court and Dartmore Apartment Buildings are architecturally significant as being a chronicle of stylistic trends in the Midwest during their five-year period of construction. They exist as a fusion of restrained Georgian Revival and Prairie School features – neither style prevailing – and are linked visually by siting, materials, scale, and design.

All three buildings to be added to the historic district are sympathetic with the original statement of significance. According to the 1983 Amendment to the Local Landmark Heritage District, the Arts and Crafts and Period Revival-influenced Ansonia Apartments:

…substantially contribute to the character and sense of place established by the immediately adjacent Drake Court and Dartmore Apartments Historic District…In terms of urban design the Ansonia is particularly respectful of its earlier surroundings. It is apparent that the designer of the Ansonia Apartments recognized and carefully complemented the rhythmic quality of the neighboring Dartmore Apartments that tightly line Jones Street. The Ansonia building line, cornice line and materials, as well as the massing and placement of details at the street-facing end walls, are all based on the Dartmore structures.

3 “Also called the Colonial Revival in an equally popular manner.” This is an original footnote from the 1980 nomination.
While the Ansonia Apartments are sympathetic to the character of the original district, the Ainsworth and Beverly Apartments are closely linked to the district through their builder, materials, scale, and design. A 1919 building permit suggests William Drake was planning to construct a pair of buildings at 2230 and 2236 Jones Street before the Dartmore Apartment were even finished. The Ainsworth and Beverly were completed in 1922 and bore a striking resemblance to the Dartmore Apartments. In fact, they were almost identical, save minor differences such as the canopy and the use of structural terra cotta blocks for the side and rear elevations. Drake even included the small terraced courtyard found between the Dartmore’s two outermost pairs of buildings. Giving individual names to identical buildings was another device copied from the Dartmore Apartments. In addition to being collectively known as the Dartmore Apartments or the Drake Court Annex, they were also called the Ames, Bedford, Colfax, Dupont and Emerson. As noted in the original nomination, the reuse of a design was quite common for the prolific Drake Realty Construction Company.

The Ansonia, Beverly, and Ainsworth Apartments are not just sympathetic to the Drake Court and the Dartmore Apartments. Their existence helps verify the influence of Drake’s original development, as similar (and even identical) apartment buildings moved westward up Jones Street and out into the rest of Omaha. This boundary increase ensures that all of the apartments historically and stylistically linked to Drake Court along Jones Street are included in the Drake Court Historic District.

Period of Significance

The amendment does require a change to the period of significance. The original period of significance was 1916 – 1921, which included the construction dates of Drake Court and the Dartmore Apartments. With this amendment, the period of significance is extended to 1929, the construction date of the Ansonia Apartments, which were the last to be constructed within the new boundaries of the Drake Court Historic District. Therefore, the new period of significance is 1916 – 1929.

Area:

- Original District: 6.5 Acres

- Boundary Decrease: 3.00 Acres
- Amended District Boundary: 4.24 Acres

Verbal Boundary Description (Added)

Beginning at the northwest corner of lot 9, Hillcrest Addition and proceeding westerly approximately 108' along the north boundary of lots 9 and 8, thence southerly along eastern boundary of lot 8 until reaching the southeast corner of lot 8, a distance of 115', thence easterly for approximately 108' along the southern boundaries of lots 7 and 6, Hillcrest Addition until reaching the southwest corner of tax lot 9, thence southerly for approximately 155' across Jones Street and along the eastern boundary of Lot 16, Hillcrest Addition, thence easterly along the southern boundary of lots 16 and 15 approximately 104', thence northerly for approximately 105' along the west boundary of lot 15 to the northwest corner of that lot, thence westerly approximately 105' along north boundary of lots 13 and 14, Hillcrest Addition, until reaching a point in line with the west boundary of lot 9, Hillcrest Addition, thence northerly across Jones Street and along the western boundary of lot 9 until reaching the original point, a distance of approximately 280'.

Boundary Justification (Added)

The boundaries of this historic district now include all of the residential apartment buildings along Jones Street that are directly associated with or stylistically influenced by William B. Drake’s Drake Realty Construction Company. Boundaries have been determined almost exclusively by “clearly differentiated patterns of historical development,” as defined in National Register Bulletin 16A.

The Anderson Building, located immediately west of the Ansonia Apartments, is individually listed as an excellent example of a commercial apartment building executed in the Sullivanesque style. As a mixed-use building, it does not belong in the strictly residential Drake Court and Apartments Historic District. The “X”-shaped Cox Avenue and Rorick Apartments were constructed c. 1950 and do not stylistically belong in this district. A c.1964, 1-story parking garage attached to the Cox Avenue Apartments abuts, but is not attached to, the western elevation of the Ainsworth Apartments. It is believed... the Cox Avenue and Rorick Apartments are individually eligible as a pair, and may eventually be individually listed along with the parking garage (Photo 7). Commercial-strip buildings and transportation-related buildings line Leavenworth Street to the south and South 24th Street to the east.

Boundary Description (Deleted)

Beginning at the northwest corner of Lot 7, Clarkson Place, thence easterly for 310.59’ along the north boundaries of lots 7-12, thence southerly for approximately 184’ along the west right of way of 20th Street unit reaching the center line of Jones Street, thence westerly to the centerline of 22nd Street approximately 645’, thence southerly for approximately 70’ along the centerline of 22nd Street until reaching a point even with the southern boundary of tax lot 9, Hillcrest Addition, thence 274.5’ westerly along the south boundary of tax lot 9, thence approximately 130’ northerly along the western boundary of tax lot 9, then 274.5’ easterly along the northern boundary of tax lot 9, thence northerly for approximately 50’ along the eastern boundary of part pt. tax lot 8, Hillcrest Addition, thence easterly for approximately 268’ to the west boundary of lot 7, Clarkson Place, thence northerly along the western boundary until reaching the original point, a distance of approximately 28’.

Boundary Justification (Deleted)

This area, originally utilized by apartment tenants as open green space and parking, is being removed from the Drake Court Apartments historic district due to a loss of integrity. A school campus constructed north of the Drake Court Apartments and the parking lot/green space north of the Dartmore Apartments has been completely paved and is surrounded by modern landscaping and fencing.
