BACKGROUND NOTE

Glen Fleischmann was born February 23, 1909 and grew up in Manley, Nebraska with his mother, father, and sisters, Rachel and Leda. He attended school in Ashland, Nebraska and later Louisville, Nebraska where he graduated high school in 1926. In July of 1929, Glen began attending the Vogue School of Art in Chicago, Illinois (Now known as The Illinois Institute of Art—Chicago). On February 10, 1931, Glen married Evelyn Fitzpatrick of Weeping Water, Nebraska. Glen started his career at the Meyer Both Company, an advertising syndicate, in 1932. By 1937, he moved to New York working for R.H. Macy & Company illustrating men’s fashion and began his long career as an illustrator in New York.

The first story he illustrated was in 1939 for Saturday Evening Post. Between 1943 and 1945, Glen was enlisted in the Army and assigned to the Department of Training Publications at the engineering school in Fort Belvoir, Virginia. After the war, Glen continued to illustrate for Saturday Evening Post until 1948 when he switched to Collier’s Weekly. Within his long career he’s produced illustrations for other magazines including Good Housekeeping, Woman’s Home Companion, The American Magazine, Liberty, Parents, This Week, and Nation’s Business. He also continued advertisement illustrations for companies such as Ford Motor Company, General Foods, Erwin Mills, Good year, Bird’s Eye Frosted Foods, TWA, Proctor & Gamble, and Nunn-Bush Shoe Company to name a few.

In the 1960s and 1970s, Glen worked for Field & Streams and Sports Afield magazines illustrating hunting, camping, boating, and fishing scenes. He also started writing books. In 1963, he wrote the book, While Rivers Flow, which became a success when it first was published but lost a following when the publisher stopped its production. In his letters, Glen hinted at a possible movie deal with Hollywood but refused to get his hopes up after the book’s lack of continued success – which he blamed on the publisher. In 1971, he tried again with the book, The Cherokee Removal, 1983: An Entire Indian Nation Is Forced Out of Its Homeland, with some success.

Glen became heavily involved in political issues and during the Watergate scandal, he wrote to President Nixon almost weekly showing his support for the president and even expressing his thoughts on many issues. Glen continued writing short stories and illustrating up until his death on March 10, 1985.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection contains documents pertaining to the artist, Glen Fleischmann. The documents range in date from 1933-1984 with a large portion dating from the 1940s through 1970s. The content of the collection revolves largely around the Glen’s reference files (composed mostly of magazine and newspaper clippings on various subjects) but also includes his personal correspondence and written artwork. The collection is divided into three series: 1) Reference files, 2) Personal files and 3) Artwork.
Note: Glen’s original artwork (sketches, drawings, paintings, etc.) have been transferred to the Museum collections. Some photographs have been transferred to the photo component [RG4228.PH].
