BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Thomas B. Cuming was born in Genesee County, New York, on December 25, 1828, the son of a Protestant Episcopal minister of Grand Rapids, Michigan. After the death of his mother, he was raised and educated in the home of a Rev. Penny, his uncle, at Rochester, New York. Thomas Cuming graduated from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor at the age of sixteen, having distinguished himself in classical education. He worked as a geologist with an expedition in the mineral region of Lake Superior, after graduation, and in 1848 gave up work to serve as a Lieutenant of A Company, 1st Regiment, Michigan Volunteers in the Mexican War. Upon completion of his enlistment he seems to have wandered into Keokuk, Iowa, where he first worked as a telegraph operator, and later took over and operated the Democratic weekly, the DISPATCH. He married Margaretta C. Murphy of Keokuk not long before he was appointed to serve as the first Secretary of the newly created Territory of Nebraska in August 1854.

He soon departed for Nebraska to take up his duties, arriving in Omaha on October 8. Within ten days the first Territorial Governor, Francis Burt, had died, and the duties of the office of Governor came upon Cuming. The first official act of Governor of Nebraska was Acting Governor Cuming's proclamation of the death of Governor Burt. He was immediately faced with an issue which was already dividing the new territory into sectional camps. The crux of the matter was to determine whether the capital of the territory was to be located at Omaha or Bellevue. Bellevue had the support of the region south of the Platte, and was probably the site which Governor Burt would have selected had he lived. Omaha, however, was the chosen site of the Iowa politicians whose influence had been a major factor in winning territorial status for Nebraska, and who had won Cuming his commission. They wanted the capital to be located at Omaha to provide a boost for Council Bluffs and the Western border of Iowa generally.

Cuming immediately ordered a census to be taken and, on the basis of the results, designated counties and legislative districts, and apportioned legislators accordingly. This stirred the controversy, rather than easing matters, because he gave a greater number of legislators to the northern section, although it is likely that the southern section was far more heavily populated. Under this storm he ordered the first session of the legislature to meet at Omaha in January 1855. Tempers rose so high that there was an abortive move to withdraw the South Platte region from the territory and annex it instead to Kansas. Kansas, however, had sectional problems of its own, and the move was not met with great enthusiasm there. The capital controversy was not settled until 1867 when, with statehood, the capital was located in Lincoln. Cuming's Iowa sentiment and his stern hand on the executive reins rendered him unpopular, but he survived a censure motion and his pro-Iowa sentiment continued as indicated by the fact that although Omaha was his legal residence, he actually lived in Council Bluffs.

He was relieved of the duties of office with the arrival in February 1855 of Mark W. Izard who had been appointed to succeed Governor Burt in December of the preceding year. Izard resigned from office October 1857 and Thomas Cuming again became Acting Governor. Cuming remained in office, although weakened by sickness, until his death on March 23, 1858.

Thomas B. Cuming was survived by his wife, Margaretta C. Cuming, the daughter of John C. and Maria (Tiernan) Murphy. During most of the remaining years of her life Mrs. Cuming lived in Omaha with the family of her brother, Frank Murphy, and her sister, Mary Frances (Fannie) Hamilton. Mrs. Cuming's mother, Maria (Tiernan) Murphy, also resided with members of her family in Omaha until her death in 1885. Margaretta C. Cuming was preceded in death by her mother; her sister Fannie, who died in March 1906; and her brothers Andrew, who died June 30, 1901 and Frank, who died December 13, 1904. Andrew died at Lincoln and Frank died out of state and was buried in Omaha, Nebraska. Mrs. Cuming died at the home of her nephew, Frank P. Hamilton, in Omaha on 12 February 1915.

SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This collection consists of four boxes of manuscript material and one reel of microfilm arranged in three subgroups: 1) Microfilmed papers of T.B. Cuming; 2) Political and Business papers of T.B. Cuming; and 3) Personal papers of T.B. Cuming and related families.

Subgroup one is divided into five series: 1) Incoming Correspondence of T.B. Cuming, 1851-1858; 2) Outgoing Correspondence of T.B. Cuming, 1854-1858; 3) Personal Correspondence, Cuming and related families, 1833-1906; 4) Receipts Bills and Warrants, 1848-1874; and 5) Miscellany, 1818-1881.

Subgroup one contains material placed on microfilm before the bulk of the Cuming papers were received. Included are materials from the Cuming family collection which have been held by the Joslyn Art Museum, Omaha, Nebraska, as part of their Cuming-Hamilton Collection. The contents include some material also found in Subgroups two and three. See the calendar of correspondence for identification of letters which are on microfilm.

Subgroup two is divided into seven series: 1) Incoming Correspondence, 1849-1860; 2) Outgoing Correspondence, 1854-1958; 3) Receipts, Bills, and Warrants, 1864-1857; 4) printed Matter, 1853-1857; 5) Speeches, 1852; 6) Clippings, 1854-1858; and 7) Miscellany.

The bulk of subgroup two consists of political and business correspondence of T.B. Cuming, 1849-1860, with greater emphasis on the period 1853-1857. Parts of the subgroup have been microfilmed in subgroup one. Also included are two annual messages of Cuming as Acting Governor, Nebraska Territorial Town lot shares for St. George, Bow City, and the Sulphur Springs Land Company, data regarding Cuming's death and estate, and identified clippings from Nebraska, Iowa, and Missouri newspapers regarding Nebraska, Cuming, and his administration.

Subgroup three is divided into three series: 1) Personal Correspondence, 1822-1913; 2) Clippings, and 3) Miscellany. The bulk of subgroup three consists of incoming correspondence of T.B. Cuming, his wife, and her relatives, the Murphy family. The incoming correspondence of Mrs. Cuming includes two folders of correspondence from her husband, 1852-1855, and undated love letters. The correspondence of the Murphy family is mostly personal correspondence and includes letters from the California gold fields in 1850, the civil War in 1865, and the mining regions of Wyoming, ca.1880. Also included are clippings regarding family history and stock certificates for the Omaha Gas Manufacturing Company and Gage County.

Accession Numbers: 487-78-66, 80-27, 80-46; 86-41, 1993.286.
