HISTORICAL NOTE

The first homestead in the territory of Nebraska to be known as Perkins County was filed by John Eckery about 3 miles west and ½ mile north of present-day Grant, Nebraska. The town was platted March 12, 1886. Settlers began moving into the area, 1884-1886, transported by Union Pacific railroad immigrant trains. The Union Pacific Railroad was the area's first railroad connection at Ogallala. Later, in 1883, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad built the "High Line" through Perkins County. The last passenger train on this line ran April 22, 1950. The first post office in the area was established at LaRughe in 1885 and operated until 1887. The first school district was formed in 1888.

An election was held in November 1887 to settle the division of Keith County and organize the new county of Perkins. Boundaries were further defined in 1889 and again in 1929. Grant was named as the county seat at a special election, February 28, 1888. The county was named in honor of Charles E. Perkins, president of the C. B. & Q. Railway System. This is a disputed fact, however.

The first bank was established at Elsie in 1907, The Commerical State Bank, and was still in existence in 1987. The Grant Telephone Company was started in 1909. The county is a member of the South Platte River Compact for irrigation and water resources. In 1986, 866 irrigation wells were registered in the county, and Congress approved a new study of the South Platte-Frenchman diversion project.

The population of the county was 1,702 people in 1904 having diminished from 4,564 in 1892 due to drought and economic depression. These figures rose again to peak in 1930 at 5,826 and diminish again to 3,205 people in 1999.
